OVER THE HILL

Many a heart goes over the hill that wonders what it shall find. That will bring it the peace it has dreamt to know, the magic of being kind. Many a heart goes over the hill, adventurous, gay and strong, To learn what it can in the world of man and taste of the right and wrong

Many a heart goes over the hill in the dark, the dusk, not caring, Because of the pitiful pain of life for a bit of devil and daring. Many a heart comes back again seeking the things that were—Many a heart that has burned in the fire and felt the great dreams stir.

Many a heart in the years to come will long to go over the hill. To visit the dreams on the other side, to taste of the good and ill: And many a heart will feel and know the beauty, the peace, the grace Of wandering back in the shadowy hour to the peace of the old home place. -Baltimore Sun.
